Chris MacDonald is a Toronto-based ethics consultant, speaker, and educator. His goal is to help organizations tame complex ethical issues. As an ethics consultant, he can help with:

- Ethics education, training, and keynote speaking;
- Ethical leadership;
- Conflict of interest training and policy development;
- Developing your own Code of Ethics or Code of Conduct;
- The values and ethics dimensions of corporate governance;
- Assessing the "ethical climate" of your workplace;
- Confidential ethics advice, opinions, and coaching;
- Expert witness services in commercial arbitration.

Chris MacDonald, Ph.D., is a tenured Associate Professor in the Department of Law and Business at Toronto Metropolitan University's Ted Rogers School of Management, where he is Director of the Ted Rogers Leadership Centre. He is Editor in Chief of The Business Ethics Journal Review and Chair of the Canadian Centre for Ethics & Corporate Policy, and has held visiting appointments at Duke University, Université de Montréal, and the Keck Graduate Institute. Chris has a Ph.D. in Philosophy from the University of British Columbia and has published widely on business ethics, conflict of interest, corporate responsibility, healthcare ethics, and professional ethics. He has provided educational and consulting services to corporate boards, professional associations, hospitals, startup companies, major charitable foundations, and the Canadian military.

Contact Information

Email	chris.macdonald@torontomu.ca
Web	chrismacdonald.ca
LinkedIn	linkedin.com/in/chris-macdonald-0ab3547